Raider Review

By CECIL JACOBS

"Good morning, class. I want you all to get out your homework from last night; I'm going to take it up and grade it."

Several groans emerge from various places around the room.

"Oh, now I just don't want to hear it," says the teacher. "Your have to be graded on something for the six weeks."

A few minutes later she is holding a very thin stack of papers. "Are these all of the papers?" she asks as she begins counting them.

"Well, no ma'am, it isn't," pipes one student. "I didn't have a chance to do mine last night." Sounds of agreement begin echoing around the room.

"Oh, really?" prompts the teacher. "And just what did you have to do yesterday that took up so much time?"

"Well, you see Miss Bunn; I had band practice yesterday afternoon, and then I had to work until seven o'clock, and then I had to go to Lynchburg with my parents and..."

Sound familiar? Everybody should remember hearing such a dialogue at one time or another. Maybe you were that student that didn't have the time. You would then know that you really did have the time.

This sort of thing goes on constantly in schools. Students, for some reason, decide to go out and have fun instead of done it at 11 o'clock and later so many times that it doesn't even phase me any more. (Well, sometimes I do have to ask the teachers to repeat things during the next day.)

Teachers aren't interested in hearing students' lame excuses. If you don't believe that, think about how many times they've heard them before. In fact, a teacher will probably respect the student more if the student accepts the consequences of too much fun. It's certainly better to offer no excuse rather than something that sounds so fake it almost bounces.

In military colleges, where discipline is the first and foremost goal, cadets have five basic responses when asked a question: Yes sir! No sir! No excuse, sir! Sir, may I ask a question? Sir, may I make a statement?

Do you know which one is used the most? That's right, the third one -- no excuse sir. It's the same in many places, including school. Teachers aren't interested in hearing excuses. What they want and expect is for the student to face up to his or her responsibility.

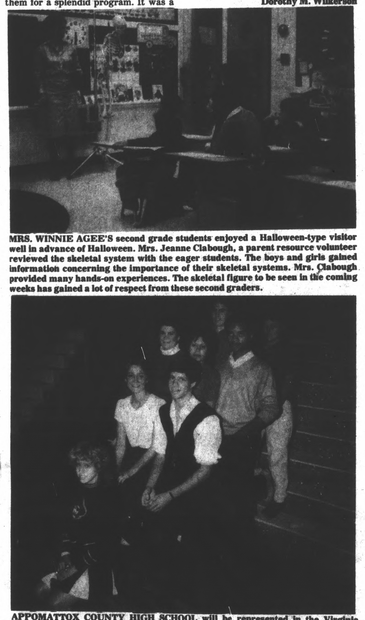
Job well done

To The Editor:

We had the pleasure of attending the musical production presented by the Chorale and Concert Choirs of Appomattox County High School on Saturday night. We enjoyed it tremendously and want to commend them for a splendid program. It was a job "Well done!" We would like to take this means of saying "thanks for an enjoyable evening!"

Sincerely,
Doris H. McClary
Thelma G. Hughes
Mary Frances Moore
Dorothy M. Wilkerson



MRS. WINNIE AGEE'S second grade students enjoyed a Halloween-type visitor well in advance of Halloween. Mrs. Jeanne Clabough, a parent resource volunteer reviewed the skeletal system with the eager students. The boys and girls gained information concerning the importance of their skeletal systems. Mrs. Clabough provided many hands-on experiences. The skeletal figure to be seen in the coming weeks has gained a lot of respect from these second graders.

APPOMATTOX COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL will be represented in the Virginia Theatre Conference competition in Fredericksburg on Oct. 29. The A.C.H.S. Drama Club's production of "Oh, Brother!" by Joseph Robinette has been accepted for presentation. There are only ten schools from the state in the contest. The winner will represent Virginia in the South Eastern Theatre Conference. When asked how she thought her students would do, Joyce Sweet, director, replied, "We'll be competing against some pretty large schools. Since this is our first time in this contest, we really don't know what to expect. We feel honored just to be given the chance to perform. My actors have really worked hard; we'll do our best."

Halloween event planned for APS

The Appomattox Primary School will open its doors Saturday, Oct. 29 for a fun-filled Halloween Carnival.

An evening of entertainment has been planned to thrill the young and "young-at-heart" from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Food and drink will be sold in the cafeterian, while games and entertainment are provided throughout the night.

An evening of entertainment will be presented on stage in the auditorium. Master of Ceremonies for this exciting event will be Brett Marston, son of Kenneth and Janice Marston of Red House. Brett was Appomattox's first State 4-H Public Speakinz Winner as he won his award this past June. This night will provide an opportunity for him to display his talents to you. A favorite of little girls, "Tomorrow", the Broadway Musical from "Annie" will be sung by Shana Harvey.

Kent Hancock will demonstrate the forms of the Martial Arts of Karate to delight wide eyed little boys. The Smith Brothers Trio will delight everyone with snappy jazz music. Though new to the Appomattox area, they have played from Richmond to Lynchburg featuring contemporary jazz and old time favorites. The group consists of the talents of brothers Gordon and Stanley Smith, and Troy Epps. Gordon and Stanley Smith own and operate Farmville Wholesale Electric Supply Co. of Farmville. Troy Epps from the Pamplin area, operates the Cowpalace Pottery creating functional hi fine stoneware pottery.

The hilight of the Halloween night will be the parade of costumes. The little ones will steal the night as they march to display their costumes and hope to win a prize. One will be chosen in each category of funniest, scariest, and the most original. Try to guess who will win in the adult costume contest, the face behind the mask may be a friend. A panel of expert judges will be on hand to decide the lucky winners. The panel consists of members of the active group "The Young Hearts" of Appomattox. The PTA is proud to have them as a part of our Halloween night.

Don't forget to carve your pumpkin and enter it in the Pumpkin Judging contest. Enter the raffle to win the lovely furniture donated by Armstrong Furniture. The food baskets are running over with goodies for a lucky winner. Guess correctly the number of corn-in-a-jar to win a prize.

On hand to greet folks for the night will be Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy. The smiling face of Raggety Ann will charm all children. Annie Pockets will be present to fill heaets with joy as a pocket can be chosen for a prize. A delightful fortune teller will surprise all with mysterious fortunes.

The class rooms and cafeteria will be filled with games, face painting, cake walks and amusements. Bingo has many wonderful items to be won, all donated by the generous merchants of Appomattox County. It was through their gifts that helped make this night possible.

Screams will be heard from the Haunted Mansion as the thrill seekers dare to enter. Inside the dark room will appear haunting and ghostly creatures. Only the brave will enter alone. If one isn't enough to satisfy Monster lovers, enter the Haunted House for another scare. The witches are eager to greet and invite guests into their parlor.

A night of sheer delight you won't want to miss is promised. Wear your costume, if only a straw hat, and join in on the one night of the year Halloween Costume fun.
